About the Palmwag Concession

The Palmwag Concession is a vast conservation area of approximately 5,845 square kilometres in the Kunene region of north-western Namibia. This region provides habitats for a wide variety of species, including rarities specifically adapted to the semi-desert conditions such as elephants, mountain zebras and giraffes. The Concession also supports nearly 70% of the world's largest free-roaming population of black rhino and functions as a crucial core area in the region. This unique fauna and flora within the Concession also serve as a national, regional and global tourist attraction.

The Palmwag Concession is one of the largest private concession areas in the world. Palmwag Lodge & Camp, in collaboration with the Ministry of Environment, Forestry and Tourism, Save the Rhino Trust, and neighbouring conservancies, promote responsible tourism so that the conservation, as well as the residents of the area, can benefit from the protection. It is essential that the "user pays" principle is applied so that this crucial conservation area can be sustained. Palmwag Lodge & Camp is fiercely committed to sound conservation practices and applies these by informing and educating guests and the general public about the sensitive nature of the area, its natural heritage and unique conservation status.

The Concession is located adjacent to Skeleton Coast Park and is surrounded by conservancies such as Torra, Anabeb and Sesfontein, as well as the Etendeka Concession. Communities within these adjacent areas have an interest in the future of the Palmwag Concession, as they have, to varying degrees established viable tourism initiatives that are dependent on healthy wildlife populations in the region.

Adjacent conservancies and communities are supportive of the Concession and are likely to continue to be so, provided that the balance of costs and benefits flowing from the use of the area is maintained and improved. There are also suites of complex relationships between conservancy committees, the Damara Traditional Authority, local communities, NGO's active in the region, commercial operators and others that must be reconciled to best ensure the region's social and ecological viability.

Rules of the Palmwag Concession:
